2018 World Affairs Seminar Program Highlights

The pace of innovation over time has gained exponential momentum. Until there was fire the nights were dark. Candles, lamps and the electric light bulb dramatically changed social behavior. Today the amount of information created, processed and stored is infinite, yet innovation continues. The impact of innovation is complex and challenging with issues ranging from who owns innovation to our personal and community responsibility to share – or control – the results.

At the 2018 World Affairs Seminar, you will:

- Look at innovation from many points of view.
- Take field trips to places where innovation takes place.
- Work with fellow delegates to define issues and problem areas related to innovation.
- Discover what you can do to make the changing world a better place.
- Explore how traditional roles and new opportunities come together as international societies adjust to the needs of the future.
- Learn how existing social systems are affected.
- Ask what part individual personal behaviors play.

The 2018 World Affairs Seminar will include experts sharing insights and views ranging from cutting edge science to centuries old traditions. Your role is to distill information, identify priorities and develop skills to both lead and collaborate with others from different cultures to reach conclusions.

The World Affairs Seminar is a life-changing experience. Since 1976 WAS has touched and changed lives, providing skills in group problem-solving, negotiation and interaction. The WAS experience will prepare you to make a difference when you inherit the world.
